President Comes Out Flatly for Man He Opposed in Primary

Now Believes Farley's
Choice Is Best Qualified for Governor

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (P)—In a move apparently aimed at solidifying Democratic ranks in his home state against the threat of Republican Thomas E. Dewey's gubernatorial bid, President Roosevelt came out flatly for the first time today behind Attorney General John J. Bennett, who won the Democratic nomination for governor of New York with the support of James A. Farley.

Mr. Roosevelt had backed Senator James Mead to carry his party's standard in the Nov. 3 election and since the Democratic convention at Brooklyn nominated Bennett instead he had brushed aside inquiries at several press conferences as to whether he would support Bennett.

Statement to Press

But today reporters were summoned to the White House to receive from a uniformed guard a mimeographed statement headed "for the press, immediate release," which said:

"In reply to numerous inquiries with reference to the political situation in his home state of New York, the president has authorized the following statement:

"Of the three men in the race for the governorship of New York, I shall cast my ballot for John Bennett because I believe that he is the best qualified."

"At the same time, the president further said:

Asks All To Vote

"I trust that every voter, not only in New York state, but throughout the country, regardless of party affiliations, will register, and on November third, exercise the right of the ballot. This is one of the essential privileges and duties of our Democratic way of life for which we are now fighting."

Boris Shaposhnikov Reported Placed In Command of Soviet Armed Forces

NEW RED COMMANDER

Said To Have Been Given
Two Posts Formerly
Held by Stalin

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (P)—Dispatches through neutral Switzerland and Axis broadcasts reported today, without confirmation, that Marshal Boris M. Shaposhnikov, chief of the Russian general staff, had been named defense commissar and commander in chief of Soviet forces, posts which have been held by Premier Stalin himself.

The prolonged absence of any official word from Moscow on these reports indicated they might represent a garbled version of Russian broadcasts based on front-page felicitations accorded Marshal Shaposhnikov by the Russian press to day on his sixtieth birthday.

Information Lacking

Soviet sources in London and the Tass news agency monitoring service there said they lacked any information whatever on the subject and expressed doubt that Stalin had relinquished military leadership of the Russians.

An Associated Press dispatch filed at 9 a. m., Moscow time, containing a letter from Stalin to Henry C. Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent there, referred to the Soviet leader in his capacity as premier, war commissar and defense council chairman.

Germany To Eat First, Goering Says in Speech

People of Occupied Countries May Go Hungry, He Declares

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (P)—Reichsmarshall Hermann Goering, Nazi No. 2 and one of the best nourished men in Germany, told his compatriots today that they would be fed this winter at the expense, if necessary of the rest of Europe. Goering was blunt about it:

"In stilling the pangs of hunger the German people come first. It is my wish that the populations of territories placed under our care or conquered by us should not suffer hunger," he said.

"But if difficulties of food supply arise due to measures by the enemy then all should know: If there is hunger, it will be, in no event, in Germany. From now on it must be an unshakable policy that German workmen and those working in Germany be supplied with food the best of all."

Second Winter in Russia

Goering spoke for an hour and forty-eight minutes in connection with the annual harvest festival and his morale-building address indicated unmistakably that German military leaders entertain no hope of finishing Russia quickly and that the high command is resigned to another defensive winter in Russia, with Germany exposed to air attack from the west.

The marshal asked all Germans to stand up under British bombing with patience and said his own air force is so busy in Russia that he cannot get around immediately to meeting the British challenge in the air. But the day of retaliation will come, he said.

Goering's address, broadcast to Germany and the rest of the world, seemed designed to explain why this year's harvest in Europe may be inadequate for the needs of the continent.

Housing Problem Worries Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 4 (P)—City officials have asked Senator Millard E. Tydings (D-Md.) to seek action toward having Annapolis declared an emergency zone and the acute housing problem here is being surveyed to determine the necessity for federal measures. Mayor William U. McCready announced today.

Little assurance was offered, however, that result of the survey would provide an answer to the question of where the Maryland legislators will stay when they come here three months from now.

McCready said the emergency measures likely would pave the way for allotment of priorities that would permit construction of new apartment houses and homes to accommodate military and civilian newcomers constantly swelling the population.

"Only in that way can a food shortage be averted."

Farm Laborers May Be Exempt From Draft Law

Revision of Statute Necessary, Sen. Tydings Asserts

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4 (P)—Revision of the selective service law to prevent the induction of farm laborers if their services were urgently needed was described today by Senator Tydings (D-Md.) as the only way to avert a food shortage in the United States.

Sen. Tydings, in a speech prepared for broadcast over station WBAL, declared that the farmer faced a greater problem in the labor shortage than in the price control and parity issue.

"It has been my thought for a long while that this so-called parity arrangement is only a political makeshift and is more theoretical than real," he said.

"The theoretical assumption of parity that as industrial wages go up, farm prices will likewise go up, is just not so and very frequently is disproved by the facts.

"The farmer ought to realize that while industrial wage increases usually follow prolonged increased food prices, that increased food costs do not always follow increased wages."

Saying that farmers have had to offer increased wages to retain what they have, Tydings added:

"The draft law has got to be revised so that farm labor, when being called up for military service, will be told to stay on the farm and to produce food if it appears that such service will more greatly aid our national war effort than would induction of farm help into our armed forces."

"Only in that way can a food shortage be averted."

Whitney Believes Labor Will Aid In Effort To Control Inflation

CLEVELAND, Oct. 4 (P)—President Alexander F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen tonight expressed the opinion that labor would "do its part" to support President Roosevelt's inflation control program, which he described as a "forward step."

"It is probably a good thing for the country," the brotherhood president added. "There isn't much satisfaction in securing wage increases and then having prices rise."

"If this action had been taken when the president issued his seven-point program, labor would be much better off. Wage adjustments in 1941 were made on the basis of the cost of living at that time. There has been a fifteen per cent increase in prices since that time, which means the worker takes the rap."

"However, I think the president has made a forward step in putting ceilings on food, commodities and increases and then having prices rise."

TEN KILLED, EIGHT INJURED IN CRASH OF PASSENGER PLANE

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (P)—Ten persons were killed and at least eight persons injured in an airplane crash at Botwood, Newfoundland, yesterday, the headquarters of the Eastern Defense Command and First Army announced late today.

Thirty-seven persons were aboard the plane, but the army announcement did not disclose how many were passengers.

Poor communications facilities at Botwood, the army said, made it difficult to establish the identity of the dead.

The crash occurred between 5 and 6 p. m. yesterday, the army said. Apparently the plane fell into the sea off Botwood since the announcement mentioned towing the wreckage into shallow water to facilitate salvage operations.

The airplane's hull was split in the crash, the army disclosed.

U. S. Army Planes Best in the War, Inquiry Reveals

House Committee Says They Are More Than a Match for Enemies

By ALEX SINGLETON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (P)—The conclusion that United States army planes "are more than a match for any of the planes that are now pitted against them" was reported today by the House Military subcommittee on aviation after an investigation into the planes' performance in actual combat.

In its formal report, the committee declared that "the proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof," and released official figures on some defense positions and killed about 1,800 men in one day's fighting. Prisoners were also taken.

American army planes "are constantly knocking down two to three enemy planes for every one of ours that is lost," it said, citing that the record for the thirty-day period, Aug. 14 to Sept. 14, in destroying planes showed a ratio of 7.5 to 1 for Uncle Sam.

The American formation of B-24's (four-motored Consolidated bombers) was attacked by five Axis fighters, four of which—three German Messerschmitt 109's and one Italian Macchi 202—were sent blazing into the sea by the defenders.

Entire German Position Menaced, Latest Moscow Statement Declares; Germans Lack Reserves To Complete Occupation of Capital; Outlook for Red Army Much Improved

MOSCOW, Monday, Oct. 5 (P)—The Russians held their ground stubbornly against incessant German attacks in the battered city of Stalingrad yesterday, a communiqué said today, and maintained the initiative northwest of the city, where the Red army's advances in the past few days were said to be threatening the entire German position.

The communiqué neither claimed advances for the Soviet forces nor acknowledged withdrawals, but it appeared there was no let-up in the intensity of the fighting despite earlier Soviet dispatches that the Germans lacked reserves within the city.

"The enemy, with infantry and tank forces is attacking our positions incessantly," the communiqué said, speaking of the battle in the rubble-filled streets.</

Green Pledges Labor Support Of New Program

President of A. F. of L.
Promises To Help on Inflation Front

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS

TORONTO, Oct. 4 (AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor pledged the support of his organization today to the United States government's new attack on the inflation front. Here to attend the federation's sixty-second annual convention opening tomorrow, Green said he interpreted the wage features as stabilization and not "freezing" and said "we will cooperate fully."

Although unable to express an opinion on all sections of President Roosevelt's executive order, he said in a press conference that one feature for which the AFL and CIO had contended had been embodied in the order.

"This is the exercise of the right of collective bargaining and utilizing the services of the war labor board in working out wage scales and settling wage disputes."

He added that "the power and authority of the War Labor Board has been protected and preserved."

Scouts Labor Board

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor meanwhile angrily accused the United States National Labor Relations Board of bias and criticized the Office of Price Administration for indecision in its annual report to the federation convention.

In a 250-printed document, released on the eve of the convention, the council said that although the three original members of the NLRB and many subordinates had been replaced "the evils we have been complaining of have not been fully removed."

The council attributed this to "the absolute power vested in three government officials to shape the structure of the trade union movement, and the retention of certain important officials—particularly regional directors—who continue to reflect the bias and attitudes of the original board."

The Utter Copper Company case was cited as evidence of "the board's incredible disregard for craft union rights" and proves beyond debate the urgent necessity of adopting the A. F. of L. proposal for an amendment that will preserve the integrity of craft groups."

Charges Favoritism

The report contended the case was a flagrant example of favoritism toward the CIO policy of organizing unions on an industry basis.

Agreeing that some may consider the time inopportune for a fight to amend the act, the council said: "Yet, unless the board abandons its present trends and permits workers to exercise the rights granted them by the Wagner act, it is self-evident that passage of our amendments may become a necessary and even indispensable war measure."

Reviewing the record of the OPA, the council said its approach to rent control was "hesitant and dilatory" and that in the field of rationing it "sought to postpone as long as possible this necessary but unpopular step." The report said the OPA also "lacked courage in attacking the price structures of the initial processors of our raw materials."

Criticizes Henderson

The council told of a "stormy session" of the OPA Labor Policy committee with Administrator Leon Henderson in which Henderson was said to have promised, but never delivered, a statement of policy on the relation of price control to wage-fixing. This failure, the report asserted, "greatly impaired the effectiveness of labor participation and cooperation with the entire OPA program."

The conclusion of the council's report recommended that the president establish an over-all board of economic and military strategy. This recommendation, which was prepared before the enactment of the recent cost-of-living stabilization legislation, was not developed substantially in the report.

Nearly 600 delegates were on hand for the opening convention session. Secretary-Treasurer George Meany reported per capita tax payments on 5,482,581 members, an increase of nearly 1,000,000 since the last convention.

Whitney Believes

Now that this has been done, I hope the president will order an investigation of many war contracts issued early in the pre-war period and squeeze the vice out of them. Many plants are making enormous profits, and a reasonable return is all any industry is entitled to now."

Whether the program is effective depends upon its administration, declared Alvaney Johnston, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

"I think there should be further explanation of how the program is to be handled," he said. "I still don't know what the president is going to do about prices. If wages are brought into line with prices, the program will be good."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
AP Staff Writer

Auxiliary Firemen Meet for Instruction In Gas Warfare Tonight

The praise given army war planes by a Congressional inquiry committee, along with the successful advance of American forces in the Aleutians, promises to quiet some of the recent critical questioning of this country's military leadership. It may be the war effort will profit.

Charged in Congress and elsewhere with failing to match specialized types of enemy and allied aircraft and censured for apparent inaction in the North Pacific, the army particularly has been in an uncomfortable position because of the necessity of wartime secrecy.

In defending the quality of American combat planes, some officials felt they were under suspicion that they feared criticism and were trying to hide failures and errors. Yet they were concerned lest the confidence of youthful pilots in their equipment should be shaken by assertions that certain Japanese and Nazi planes were superior and by persistent reports that some new American models were dangerous to fly.

Until the air war in Europe reaches a more intensified scale, the House Military sub-committee's conclusion that our present aircraft more than hold their own, along with supporting evidence to this effect, will resolve most remaining doubts on this score.

For the sake of security, the army and navy had to ignore expressions of popular impatience and wait nearly four months before disclosing what almost all this time was secretly in preparation in the Aleutians.

When the Japanese bombed Dutch Harbor and landed troops in Kiska and Attu in early June, the temptation presumably existed, especially after the Midway naval victory, to dispatch an expedition to dislodge them without delay. Under more urgent circumstances, the British did send a hastily-equipped force to try to halt the 1940 Nazi invasion, with consequences that carried a warning.

The more cautious course that was followed in the North Pacific was vindicated when an American amphibious force was able to occupy the Andreanof group of islands and, without opposition, set up an air field within easy range of Kiska.

Grants Cassidy's Request

The letter was written yesterday by the man who combines the posts of premier, war commissar, chairman of the defense council and secretary general of the Communist party. It was in response to my letter delivered directly to the gate of the Kremlin the day before requesting an interview or a written answer to the questions.

Stalin's reply in Russian, with the authorized English translation, was handed to me early today by Nikolai Falgunov, chief of the press department of the commissariat of foreign affairs.

It was Stalin's first public statement on the question of a second front for almost a year. He previously had mentioned it only in a speech to a meeting of the Soviet Communist party and other organizations in Moscow Nov. 6, 1941, on the eve of the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

"One of the reasons for the reverses of the Red army is the absence of a second front," he said at the time.

"There can be no doubt that the absence of a second front in Europe against the Germans makes the position of the German army considerably easier. But neither can there be any doubt that the appearance of a second front on the European continent—and it must unquestionably appear in the near future—will materially ease the situation of our army to the detriment of the German army."

Stalin refrained from mentioning a second front in his public statements on the occasions of Red army day and May day.

In his May day order, Stalin said:

"The peoples of all freedom-loving countries look upon the Soviet Union as a force that is capable of delivering the world from the Hitlerite plague."

The more cautious course that was followed in the North Pacific was vindicated when an American amphibious force was able to occupy the Andreanof group of islands and, without opposition, set up an air field within easy range of Kiska.

promised will contribute to the feeding of the Reich this winter.

Goering indicated that in only two respects were European and German harvests adequate. The potato crop, he said, was the best ever, while in the Kuban region along the Don German troops took a district in which "sun flowers stretch as far as the eye can see."

The sun flower seed oil, he said, will do much to bolster the scanty fat rations of Germany and the occupied countries.

Making one of the homely smart-cracks, for which he is famous, he said:

"Take care of your potatoes, take them into the drawing room. I would rather put my potatoes in the drawing room than in the cellar, for a drawing room is of no use to me now, but potatoes will be of great use to me in the winter and spring time."

Then he promised there would be some extra meat for Christmas (the average ration at present being about three quarters of a pound weekly), extra flour "and probably other good things."

Special rations are being given to the more seriously bombed cities, he added, and said that on orders of Hitler every soldier returning from the front will be given a food package containing two pounds each of flour, beans and sugar, a pound of butter "and a great big sausage."

It's not for the soldier, "who is adequately fed," Goering said, but a gift "with which he can bring joy to his family."

The German army, he said, is supplied with food completely from occupied territories. The Reich proper needs to feed only itself, at a three power conference in Moscow a year ago.

Convoys Reach Russia

Although the Germans have been attacking the northern shipping route between the United States and Britain and Russia with air, surface and submarine forces, convoys have continued to bring in supplies. Late last month, Foreign Minister Anthony Eden announced in Britain that the largest convoy ever to reach Russia had delivered a great cargo of fighting equipment despite furious German attacks.

The main obligation of the Allies, as indicated by frequent comment of the official Russian press, is considered here to be the opening of a second front.

Stalin discussed this matter personally both with Prime Minister Churchill and with Wendell Willkie, President Roosevelt's personal envoy who was here last month.

After their visits to Moscow, Churchill acknowledged in the House of Commons that Russia was not satisfied with the support she was receiving.

Willkie declared that it was his conviction that the Allies could help Russia best by starting a second front, and expressed the opinion that certain military leaders might have to be prodded into action.

This Growing Cost Should Be Reduced

AS Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka has declared in an interview, fire safety begins at home, and the first job of most householders during National Fire Prevention week (October 4-10) should be a fire-hazard hunt.

Chief Hoenicka has pointed out that the most common dangers to seek out are defective wiring, defective heating apparatus, flammable roofs, accumulations of rubbish, sparky chimneys and gasoline in the home.

Wiring and heating system defects should be repaired by an expert. The roof should be covered over with fire-resistant material such as asphalt shingles. The chimney should be cleaned, and all rubbish cleared out of basement, attic and closets. Gasoline should never be kept in the house for dry cleaning or any other purpose.

United States fire figures show the importance of Fire Prevention week. America's material fire loss for 1941 was more than $300,000,000, and already in 1942 more factories, homes and raw materials are being destroyed by flames than were last year. Of the 10,000 persons who lost their lives last year in flaming buildings, many were workmen vitally needed in war production industries.

It is to combat this increased fire menace of wartime that every citizen should not only take part in the observance of Fire Prevention week but also carry on its teachings throughout the year.

Almost any day now we expect the Italian newspapers to carry this want ad: "For Sale—Balcony in good condition. Splendid acoustics. Make me an offer.—B. MUSSOLINI."

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Make way for the first novel of this war by an American who has fought in it. Make way, Bookworms and all others who know a good book when they read it, for Ensign Howard Hunt, author of "East of Farewell" (Knopf)—a sturdy, sinewy story of the officers and men of an American destroyer in the North Atlantic.

Young Hunt is only 24 and he grew up like any other American boy who went to our public schools and to an American college. He studied writing in Brown university but paid more attention to playing in a dance band. But when he was graduated in 1940 he had a war on his hands. So he signed up in the Naval Reserve, became an ensign and from May 1941 to February 1942 he had active duty at sea in the North Atlantic patrol that protected our convoys against the wolf-packs.

Early this year he was detached from his ship and sent to a hospital for treatment of an injury and during his months of convalescence he wrote "East of Farewell." Had he not been injured, had he not been ordered to rest after his operation, this book would not have been written—and we'd all be losers.

The setting is an American destroyer which is guarding a horde of freighters eastward to England. On the destroyer is the convoy Commodore, an old hand at sea who is wondering if he is not too old. In command is the Chief, restless in the presence of the Commodore. Others are Pratt, executive officer; O'Brien, chief engineer; Lieutenant Walton (j.g.), a prig and a martinet; Ensigns Maxon and Gaylord, good guys; and the good men of the crew. They are all bored and bitter, disgruntled, with frayed nerves, a little afraid, a little doubtful of what they may do in an emergency. The weather is bad, the fuel is low, they draw nearer and nearer to the lurking submarines.

And then it happens! The sub attacks. Three freighters go down. The destroyer springs to the attack. And these Americans become a fine team and do their job magnificently.

It's a grim, honest and heartening book and it checks with the Browser's memories of what men were like in that other war. And it's bound to be a part of a race that produces such men as these.

Kate L. Mitchell's "India Without Fable: A 1942 Survey" (Knopf) cleared up in the Browser's mind many a fuzzy idea about India. For ten years Miss Mitchell has been a specialist on Western Pacific problems. She has a cool, clear mind and she plays no favorites. Read this book and you will see why the British will not, unless compelled, ever give freedom without strings to India. Because during these past 150 years England has tied India so close to its own economic system that there would be no England without India.

Random House has published "Six Plays by Kaufman and Hart." They are Once in a Lifetime, Merrily We Roll Along, You Can't Take It with You, The American Way, The Man Who Came to Dinner and George Washington Slept Here—all hilarious and biting American plays.

With three delightful introductions by Brooks Atkinson, Moss Hart on Kaufman, and George Kaufman on Hart.

Richard Lillard's "Desert Challenge: An Interpretation of Nevada" (Knopf) is the last word on Nevada, a lively and informative book about a state that millions have travelled through but few really understand. A strong and independent state whose people believe in a minimum of government, but who feel little responsibility for the down-and-outer.

That prospect is as certain as tomorrow's dawn. We need only to make the victory definite. Then the choice will be ours, either boldly to harness the stream of plenty or, if we are timid and of restricted vision, to be embarrassed by the very abundance of the means we have created.

"If I know the American chemist, his will be the bold course—the course toward a better destiny. And all science will set its course by the same compass."

All this is more than interesting—it is thrilling. The forecast is the more impressive because it is given by a man who knows his stuff and is not basing his estimates upon mere idle conjecture or wishful hope. If anything, these estimates by him and by the national commerce group should move everybody to do his and her utmost to bring the war to as early a conclusion as possible so that the nation, and the world, may conserve life and treasure, and begin to enjoy the fruits of this marvelous development. And there is only one way in which it can be concluded, and that is through victory over the aggressors.

Trip by Roosevelt A Political Help, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—I never get edifice enough to Mr. Roosevelt to see how much he is laughing when he makes his biennial criticism of "the columnists" and the press.

He always uses this old line just before election. At least he used it two years ago, just as he used defense plant inspection trips then.

It is a familiar Rooseveltian technique, amusing, easily explained and probably generally understood by now.

The president always says he favors "straight news," meaning his news, the news he gives out to the press associations, and he would like to have nothing else in the newspapers.

You will never see much criticism of the war effort in this kind of news, except maybe a statement from a Republican now and then, at the tail end of administration announcements.

But the kind of news that gets things done in Washington, that spurs administrators to new efforts and the inefficient ones to correction of their errors, or firing, happens to be the kind that Mr. Roosevelt says he does not like. It is good for his administration and for the prosecution of the war, but he does not like it.

Unpleasant but Necessary

No one expected him to like it. Nobody likes it. But both he and everyone else knows it must be done. He does not propose to abolish it, as far as I have heard.

He merely mentioned again, before election, his old idea—and I assume for the same old purpose. If he can create the impression that all criticism of his administration is erroneous, the people will believe only the straight news, what his handout bureaus grind out.

He never has effected this result, for a very good reason.

He and other Washington officials assume criticism comes from newspapers and the radio.

It does not. They are only the vehicles of criticism that exists in the minds and hearts of the people and government officials. The origin of criticism lies in those two sources alone.

The newspapers and radio merely express it, because they know if it becomes public, a demand is there by created for correction of the situation to which their accusing finger is pointed.

If all the press and radio were abolished this moment, criticism would not cease. The only way Mr. Roosevelt can stop criticism is to make the war effort 100 percent efficient. Instead of ninety-four or ninety-five percent, as he says. If we would start winning the war, much or all of it would die away.

Reasons for Trip

Plenty of reasons can be found for Mr. Roosevelt's defense inspection tour.

Two days before it was concluded, War Producer Nelson gave out some figures on August production, which he said were "not worth bragging about." He showed the goals fixed by the president were not being met.

Early this year he was detached from his ship and sent to a hospital for treatment of an injury and during his months of convalescence he wrote "East of Farewell." Had he not been injured, had he not been ordered to rest after his operation, this book would not have been written—and we'd all be losers.

Good for John Green! Other leaders of organized labor have said that strikes in war industries in violation of their solemn promise that there would be none, are due to small minorities—and stopped there. They have seldom made even a gesture toward punishing local unions or individual members who break the pledge.

John Green goes all the way. He says that strikes, even though caused by small minorities, endanger the nation, aid its enemies and injure unionism—and he proposes to drive the trouble makers out of his union. Labor needs much more of this type of leadership.

of town during the farm bloc fight over inflation, preventing bloc members from getting near him with various alternative proposals.

Politically Advantageous

Mr. Roosevelt denies the trip was political in any phase, and points out he saw only the elected officials, not the candidates. I think, however, the trip had certain definite political advantages.

Some of you may recall that in this column published September 19, it was reported the administration politics were alarmed at the lightness of the primary vote, particularly at the failure of war workers to go to the polls, and that Mr. Nelson had issued an invitation to such workers to take time from their jobs to cast ballots.

This is the class of workers with which the president came into direct contact on his trip. It is the class which the administration expects to contribute votes in large quantities, in view of the salaries paid.

Mr. Roosevelt's personal appearance before them a month before election may help that administration political purpose.

John Green Goes All the Way

From the Pittsburgh Press

John Green, president of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO) said this to the organization's national convention in New York:

"There are certain individuals who are taking it on themselves to violate the union rules, injure the union's reputation for keeping its word, and ignore the welfare of the nation."

"If this trouble making does not stop, the rank and file of loyal union members will take steps to get rid of those who are making the trouble."

"And there are still some among us who think that we can indulge ourselves in the luxury of pre-war unionism as usual. There are still some who fail to realize that there is no justification for any violation of our pledge not to strike; that there is no grievance so pressing nor employer so recalcitrant that we cannot aid ourselves and our country more by settling the dispute through the channels of peaceful mediation and conciliation, or the arbitration machinery of our collective bargaining contracts."

"As far as your national officers are concerned, and I state this as the policy of our union, any delay or stoppage in production can be considered as an aid to our enemies."

"Good for John Green! Other leaders of organized labor have said that strikes in war industries in violation of their solemn promise that there would be none, are due to small minorities—and stopped there. They have seldom made even a gesture toward punishing local unions or individual members who break the pledge."

Now it turns out that the President in his conference with the press on Friday was under impression that industry was to achieve a rate of 60,000 planes by the end of 1942 and not actually make that many, but a reference to his message indicates that he expected 60,000 planes actually to be made in 1942.

But the total number manufactured in 1942 will be quite near that figure, and if there is a lower production rate for 1943 than set, it will not mean that anybody has fallen down because the program really is of fantastic size. Even if we met only three-fourths of the 1943 program, America would be performing a miracle.

The president spoke of the unfortunate reactions which he got in some parts of the country to what was happening in Washington. He unquestionably ran into the widespread criticism of Selective Service officials for their confusion and contradictory statements on the draft and he probably heard a good deal about Washington red tape. The next one is to be in the spring, which is too far off.

It would be very helpful if the president could make his inspection trip right here in Washington—if he could observe at first some of the activities about which the country hears. Thus, if the president had some way to know the many contradictory pieces of information that emanate from Washington and the mass of questionnaires, reports and requests for data that harass industrial executives, he would be in a position to speed up the war effort considerably. He would find that all these topics are under consideration by someone in the government, but that it takes an official very high up to accelerate the many reforms, which take months and months to get crystallized into an order or a directive.

But with all its mistakes, even the government machinery is stumbling forward, not backward, and if the war lasts long enough the American democracy—industry, labor and government—will be able to withstand the many times what Hitler and his allies accomplished in their seven years of preparation.

A Dangerous Suggestion

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Mr. Willkie's forthright demand for the opening of a second front against Germany by England and the United States voices, perhaps, the sentiments of an overwhelming majority of the American people. At all events, most of us have been wondering why a second front hasn't been opened. To suggest, however, as Mr. Willkie plainly does, that public opinion go to work on the military authorities and compel the opening of this offensive strike is an extremely dangerous.

It can be taken for granted, we think, that the military authorities of England and the United States realize that the surest way of whipping Hitler would be to move on him at home while he is engaged in Russia. The fact that they have not moved must mean that in their opinion we are not yet strong enough to undertake the invasion. It may be, of course, that they are being too cautious. But it is either Mr. Willkie or the average American in the street competent to pass such a judgment? It would be a terrible thing were the allied war managers prodded into an invasion effort that failed for lack of preparation. For good or ill, it would seem to us that until there is more convincing evidence of overcaution or timidity than the opinion of a layman, we must leave conduct of the war strategy to those to whom it has been entrusted.

He frightened the Japs all right. They did their best to hush-hush, in their own midst, the news of the damage that small-scale raid did to 'em. They're afraid to have it advertised locally. Nevertheless, a fraction of the news leaked out, and it seems to have perturbed Japan's civilandom to quite a high percentage.

Morning Motto

Nothing can ruin our country. The people themselves will understand it's safety—and nothing can save it if they leave that safety in any hands other than their own.

SYNOPSIS
Following her mother's death, red-haired, slim MAY DEXTER leaves Omaha and obtains a job in the Nordex Aircraft plant in California.

YESTERDAY: She and Fran Bond, a short, dark, dancer, decide to share an apartment. They are assigned to work by Ken Grant, a mechanical engineer, whom Mary met on route to the Pacific coast.

CHAPTER THREE
"HEY! UNLESS you intend staying up with that tapestry, you better take out that last tack!" Ken grinned from the doorway.

Mary glanced about startled, then laughed. She saw that she had indeed caught the edge of the blue sleeve of her dressing gown beneath the invisible tack she was using to hold the Chinese tapestry in place. She had done it when she turned to see who was coming in the door. She told him it would have been entirely his fault.

"Not that you wouldn't add to the decoration," Ken observed admiringly, appreciating the slim, blue-robed figure, whose golden red hair was aurooled by the aged yellow tapestry. "You look like a Chinese-Dresden Shepardess or something."

"Careful!" Mary laughed as he helped her down from the low teakwood chest. "That sounds like counter espionage to me. Come on, I want you to see what we've done since last night."

She led him proudly through the transformed apartment. Ken whistled in astonishment at the deep rug of golden tan, the rich dull green of the draperies interlined with the same antique gold—at the small ivory and jade figurines that were separating the books on the bookshelves.

"You shouldn't have gone in for luxury," he said severely. "This stuff will keep you broke for months—"

"It was my mother," Mary said softly. "It's been in storage since she died, and I had it shipped out when I came so I could use it in my first home. This is it."

"Oh—I'm sorry," said Ken. "You should be!" Fran's voice called. "Mary can run her own business, thank you—with my help! If you want to be useful, come here!"

They found Fran in the red and white kitchen, standing practically on her head to line the pan cupboard with shelf paper. Mary began to put away dishes in the freshly lined upper shelves and Ken brought out a paper-wrapped parcel and tore it open.

"I got your tea balls and exchanged the strainer," he said good-naturedly. "And did I take a questioning on which one of you I was married to and why not?"

"You poor thing!" Mary laughed. "After the course of housekeeping you've been through this week I'll bet you didn't find it hard to tell them why not."

"Well, I haven't gotten bored or lonely, with time hanging heavy or anything," Ken grinned.

"Come to think of it, I haven't either," acknowledged Mary. "I can't remember when a week has gone so fast, and the first night at work I wondered how I'd go through this week."

As they continued working in the bright little kitchen, Mary found herself humming happily. In spite of the long hours and hard work, it had all been absorbing and fun. Fran had proved pure gold as a roommate—a good-natured, ingenuous, entertaining person with whom it was a joy to discuss the day's happenings. And Ken—good old Ken—she found herself thinking already. Always at hand, ready to help, to advise, to caution. Strange how she had been thrown into a topsy-turvy world to find her first feeling of security!

Only—part of the picture was missing. She was aware of a constant sense of waiting—a tinge of expectancy. She understood it one day when a man came through the department who looked at first glance like another dark-haired young man. In her sharp reaction of disappointment she realized how unconsciously she had been watching for him.

Connie was standing impishly at her desk when the swing shift came into the personnel that day. "Don't put your things away," she ordered. "I have an interdepartmental memo from the president's office."

She read it to them, standing erect with controlled excitement. The B-99 will have its first public test flight at 4:45 today. All workers are to proceed to the flying field for this event.

As Mary and Connie walked out, urged by the tide of other workers, toward the flying field, Mary asked, "Why all this football enthusiasm over testing a plane?"

"It's the first bomber of this size we've turned out," Connie explained.

As she rushed on in eager description of the number of miles the great machine could go without refueling and the size bombs it could carry, Mary reflected it was more like the boasting of a proud parent.

The great bomber lay gleaming in the afternoon sun, roped off from the mass of workers and surrounded by a small knot of officials. Mary was slightly amused as she followed a determined Connie right through the crowd to the front line and squeezed in beside her just back of the rope. Connie was tense; her mind was a tortured treadmill. "Bruce Martin . . . crack up some day . . . the kind of a rap he took . . . ." She longed to turn and ask the men what they meant, but as the ship rolled to a stop and the officials once more surrounded the pilot, she stood frozen, watching hypnotically.

He was moving toward the crowd now, answering their cheering with a casual wave as he made his first quick report to the officials walking with him. He was close enough now for Mary to see plainly the line of bitterness on his face and hear the hard, sardonic note in his voice. Then, abruptly, his eyes fastened on her—picked out the slender green-suited figure in the front line with the sun glinting on the red-gold masses of her hair. He paused before her. He was taking off his helmet and wiping his brow. He was flashing that amused smile at her.

"Well, if it isn't the weepy redhead," he murmured. "How goes it?"

"All right," said Mary. He was gone, moving in the group of officials with his careless, assured walk and disappearing into the main building.

Mary was conscious of Connie's hand on her arm.

"What's wrong?" Connie was demanding sharply. "You're pale as a ghost. You better run over to the dispensary." She eyed Mary keenly. "You might be in the wrong work," she said, "if you can't stand a test flight."

Mary smiled and took a deep breath. "You'd be surprised," she murmured, "but I think I'm here for the duration."

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

BY DEAN HALILDAY

PLANTING POINTERS

There are two main planting seasons—Spring, as growth starts, and Fall, when the wood is matured and ripened.

Very large trees are moved with a frozen ball of earth around their roots. It is always best to transplant on a cloudy, cool day, or, at least, to wait until the cool of the evening. When transplanting, never expose the roots to wind or sun. Wind on the roots is even more disastrous than sun. Plants feed through minute root hairs; if they become shriveled by the drying effects of the sun or wind, new hair roots must develop before the tree can feed itself. When the tree comes from the nursery, if it can be planted at once, soak the roots in water while the hoe is being prepared.

As illustrated in the Garden Graph, if, due to weather or other use, the tree cannot be planted immediately, then dig a trench at a ready spot, set in the tree at an angle. Cover the roots with the soil. The soil must be kept wet. An extra measure is to put a piece of wet turp over the tree trunk.

"Iceland" Introduces New Song and Dance

One of the tests of a truly great musical screen hit is the successful introduction of a combined new song and dance. This almost Herculean task was amazingly performed—and how successfully!—in Twentieth Century-Fox's new musical, "Iceland," starring lovely Sonja Henie and handsome John Payne.

The song chefs, Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, one of Hollywood's greatest song composing teams, bent over backwards when they worked on "Iceland," producing a list of song hits including "You Can't Say No to a Soldier;" "Lovers' Knot;" "Let's Bring New Glory to Old Glory;" "There'll Never Be Another You;" and "I Like a Military Tune."

It was "Lovers' Knot," however, that not only established a song hit, but also a dance craze.

Working with Dance Director Hermes Pan of Twentieth Century-Fox, Gordon and Warren created the "Lovers' Knot Polka," which not only has the potentialities of becoming as popular as the "Lambeth Walk" of a few years ago, but is already pointing toward such success. Anyone can dance it, taking Pan's word for it, and to aid in its rhythmic execution, the lyrics of the song contain the directions for each step in the dance!

An elaborate musical with exhilarating skating sequences now at the Strand theater, "Iceland" stars Sonja Henie and John Payne. Featured are Jack Oakie and Sammy Kaye and his orchestra.

Truman Bradley Is Ex-Radio Announcer

Truman Bradley, who has been featured in a number of Twentieth-Century-Fox productions, gets his most important role to date in the company's "The Night before the Divorce" now showing at the Garden theater.

Bradley was formerly a radio announcer and actor, but unlike Bob Hope or Jack Benny, made the switch to motion pictures without any personal following.

In "The Night before the Divorce" he plays the role of a detective who succeeds in reconciling Lynn Bari and Joseph Allen, Jr., by accusing them of murder.

Beautiful Madeleine Carroll found something to do when she wasn't before the technicolor cameras down on the island of Salt Cay, British West Indies, where Paramount's "Bahama Passage" was filmed.

"Stirling Hayden, co-star of the picture also at the Garden, saw her writing diligently late one afternoon. Upon investigation he found she was addressing postcards to 100 students of Columbia university, who, twice running, voted her the woman they'd most like to have with them on just such an island.

The postcards read: "Having wonderful time. Wish you were here. Madeleine."

George Houston Has Two Pardners

Triple trouble!

Veteran film heavies must now deal with another trio of six gun experts. Two-gun singing George Houston has picked himself two hard-riding, fight-loving pals for his new series of Producers Releasing Corporation musical western films, the first of which, "The Lone Rider and the Bandit" is due tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

George's screen buddies are veteran comic Al St. John, who also appeared with George in his last series of westerns, and Dennis (Smoky) Moore, who is elevated to stardom after several years of playing smaller roles and doubling for the stars of western films.

Naturally, the films will lean strongly on the musical side. And why not—Houston is the only movie cowboy ever to sing grand opera before the President of the United States and many crowned heads of Europe. Houston will also take care of his end of fistcuffs—he was a member of the boxing team at college, while St. John, a veteran of the movies since which he was a member, will act as the comic of the trio.

The first American newspapers were "news letters" usually published by postmasters who had an opportunity to learn first of news sent in letters from other parts of the country.

Local Members Attend Annual Fall Music Club Session

John Welsh, Head of Music Department at Princeton, Is Guest Speaker

All Western Maryland board members of the Maryland Federation of Music Clubs attended the annual fall meeting in Hagerstown Saturday.

The guest speaker was John Welsh, head of the Music department of Princeton university. He stressed the place of music in upholding the morale of the people for, as he pointed out, one "cannot get in the dumps, if there is a song in the heart." He emphasized the fact that the National Association of Musical Recreation is striving to make the American army a singing army and America a singing nation. He also brought out the fact that service clubs are encouraging competition among song writers to tell the story of the times in their songs.

Mr. Welsh, assistant to Augustus D. Zanig, consulting expert of the United States Treasury Department, director of the National Association for Musical Recreation, and former member of Harvard university faculty, told of eight government agencies that use music in their programs. He was introduced by Mrs. Robert E. Clapp, Frederick, first vice-president, who presided at the luncheon meeting.

The business meeting will follow and committees for the year will be appointed, delegates to the meeting of the Federation of Republican Women of Maryland, to be held in Baltimore this month, will be elected, and routine business transacted.

All members are requested to attend.

THE REV. KARL BECK TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCES WHILE JAP PRISONER

Former Frostburg Pastor Says He Was Made Comfortable

FROSTBURG, Oct. 4 — During a weekend visit here to attend the diamond jubilee celebration of the Salem Evangelical and Reformed church, the Rev. Karl H. Beck, former pastor, in an interview with a NEWS reporter related his experiences while he was detained in Japan by the Japanese government after the Pearl Harbor attack.

The Rev. Mr. Beck was doing missionary work in the Far East at the outbreak of the war. He returned to this country September 25 after being released in an international exchange.

The Rev. Mr. Beck's story of his internment follows:

"There is little that I can say out of my own experiences to justify the expectation of folks who counted on my relating tales of torture, privation and insult. But I do know that there are Americans who did experience those things.

"In my own case, it seemed the Japanese even went out of their way to give protection and see that I had adequate food and medical aid. And from the day I set out from Yoyang — there it's a thousand miles from the coast where I spent the two years since I last went to China, it seemed the Japanese were indeed going beyond what might be reasonably expected to make the trip both safe and comfortable.

WORLD SERIES PRESSBOX NOTES

By SID FEDER

YANKEE STADIUM, New York Oct. 4 (P)—Well, it was Cardinals 9, Yankees 6. The Cards hooked a field goal with their touchdown to win. . . . And the Yanks didn't have the Chicago Bears' backfield to carry them on to third.

Walker Cooper singled him home, sending Donald to the showers and bringing Ernie Bonham in. Johnny Hopp sacrificed. Whitey Kurowski was walked intentionally to load the bases, and a long fly by Martin Marion brought Cooper home.

Bonham Relieves Donald

The first was to Enos (Country) Slaughter and the second to Stan Musial. With the count on Musial three and two, Slaughter set sail for second and Catcher Bill Dickey, not knowing whether the next pitch was a ball or strike, made a wild throw to second that allowed Slaughter to go on to third.

Walker Cooper singled him home, sending Donald to the showers and bringing Ernie Bonham in. Johnny Hopp sacrificed. Whitey Kurowski was walked intentionally to load the bases, and a long fly by Martin Marion brought Cooper home.

The Cards added a run for extra measure in the ninth on a single by Hopp, a sacrifice by Kurowski and a single by Relief Pitcher Lefty Max Lanier, who was awarded credit for the victory by the official scorers.

Mort Cooper, the big, grinning right-hander, who had won twenty-two games this season in the National League, but who was the loser in the opening game of the series, made an attempt to salvage his reputation today. Instead he had it marred even more.

He was thrown for a one-run loss in the first inning when Red Roife doubled and Roy Cullenbene singled, but he seemed capable of holding the 6 to 1 lead furnished him in the fourth, when the Cardinals came to bat eleven times with the first six of them scoring.

This explosion was set off by Musial, who led off with a safe bunt that incited the Yankees to an angry protest around Umpire George Magerkurth. Walker Cooper followed with another single that sizzled between Borowy's legs and Hopp waited out a walk to load the bases.

Rizzuto Opens Yank Rally

After that things happened fast and loose. Kurowski smashed a ground single through Roife for two runs and the blond, slender rookie on the mound yielded to the pressure. Mopping his brow, he walked Marion on four pitches to load the bases and Mort Cooper brought in another pair of runs with a single to right.

Donald made his appearance at this point and forced Jimmy Brown to fly out. But Terry Moore smashed a single to center on the first pitch for a run and after Slaughter had forced Moore, Musial on his second turn at bat doubled the sixth run across. By making two hits in one inning he tied a World Series record held by several players. Walker Cooper finally grounded out to end the inning.

There probably was no one in the big, closely-packed stadium who thought Cooper would have any real trouble after that and he set down the Yanks in order in the next two chapters.

But little Phil Rizzuto, who made three hits during the proceedings, opened the sixth stanza with a sizzling single to left. Roife walked and the Cardinal bullpen went into action, but Cooper was allowed to remain till Cullenbene singled Rizzuto home. DiMaggio popped out and Keller hammered his high, arching homer into the lower right-field stands about 400 feet from the plate.

But Lanier took charge from the seventh on, holding the Yanks helpless on two singles, and batted in St. Louis' final run so the scorers decided he should have credit for the outcome.

Altogether the Cardinals used four pitchers and the Yankees three, and for the first time in the series St. Louis outhit the Yankee powerhouse twelve to ten, with DiMaggio going hitless after accounting for six safeties in the first three games.

This caused both pilots to come up to what may be the final game here tomorrow with only one logical pitching choice. Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks said he would start Red Ruffing, the 38-year-old veteran, who set a series record by pitching seven two-thirds hitless innings in the first game although batted out of the box in the ninth. Southworth gave the assignment for what he hopes will be the clincher to lean Johnny Beazley, the rookie right-hander who won the second game.

If the Yankees should win tomorrow, then the rivals would leave tomorrow night for St. Louis where the sixth game would be played in the finals.

France was two down at the end of the first eighteen holes, shooting a 79 to Creegan's 77, but on the second eighteen, France turned in

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (P)—Singing the haunting hill-billy tune, "Willie, My Toes Is Cold," the triumphant St. Louis Cardinals, certain victory is only twenty-four hours away, soothed themselves into complete relaxation with song in their dressing room after blasting the New York Yankees, 9 to 6, for their third successive victory today.

While Navy was administering a 35-0 licking to the Cavaliers of Virginia, Princeton was being turned back 19-7 by an underrated Williams team.

All of which gave Navy adherents plenty on which to base their sunshine spreading for next week's meeting with Princeton in New York.

As a matter of fact, the caliber of play turned in by the green but seasonings Middies Saturday at Indianapolis prompted Coach Frank Murphy of the University of Virginia to remark that "we had no right on the same field with Navy."

Middle Coach Praised

"Commander John E. Whelchel has done a remarkable job with the Middies," Murray continued. "Starting the season with raw material, he has developed a fast, clever team that should show increased power in time."

Whelchel credited his athletes with playing a "quick, alert game."

The Navy coach, who has dropped the pessimism which marked his attitude before and shortly after the 3-0 loss to Williams and Mary in the season opener, hasn't gone overboard on confidence yet, however.

"We'll know what it is to be scored on before the season is over," he added.

Yankees Are Tough

Cooper smiled. He said the ball which Keller propelled into the stands was fast one, outside.

Southworth, while hopeful tomorrow's game would end the series, still refused to make any predictions as regards the final outcome.

"Anybody who would be silly," Southworth explained.

"Look what happened out there. They're tough. They gave us the toughest four games we've had to play this season."

"We'll be out here tomorrow and play the best we know how. We'll be out to win if we possibly can. I made some quick changes today that might call for an explanation, but I was determined to win and get it over with."

"You saw the real Cardinals play today. I'd been looking for them to break loose. They played typical Cardinal ball. We're hitting on eight—yes, all nine cylinders now."

The cleats on the Cardinals' shoes clattered noisier than ever on the concrete floor as they went from one to another to extend congratulations. They figure it will be all over tomorrow.

Southworth announced that Jean Rizzuto announced that Jean

Johnny Beazley, sensational 23-year-old right handed pitcher, would oppose the Yanks in the fifth game of the series tomorrow. He had three days of rest since defeating the Yanks in the second game of the series, 4 to 3, at St. Louis last Thursday. Beazley, while in the Southern Association last season, frequently pitched with only two days rest.

"He's young and responds quickly," Southworth said.

Young Beazley was immensely pleased with the assignment and will go into it with confidence.

Beazley To Join Marines

"Hell," he said, "I figure I can beat anybody until they beat me and then I'm ready to try again. Those Yanks got ten hits off me at St. Louis. Five in the last two innings. But I'll give 'em everything I've got tomorrow—give 'em hell. They're tough, but we're pretty much tied now."

Local Elevens Make Next Starts at Home

Fort Hill Faces
Berkeley Outfit
On Friday Night

LaSalle Meets Ridgeley and Allegany Plays
Alumni on Saturday

Fort Hill and Allegany high gridders, who have won two straight games this season by lop-sided scores, will attempt to extend winning streaks in home games this week while the LaSalle Explorers, stopped in both of their 1942 starts, will be favored to enter the victory column in a third contest slated for the Fort Hill stadium.

The Fort Hill Sentinels, who blasted Ridgeley 47-0 last Thursday after opening the season with a 48-0 triumph over Thomas, will make their third straight appearance at home Friday night when they tangle with the Berkeley Springs (W. Va.) High Indians.

The following afternoon at 2:30, Allegany's Campers, who followed up a 47-0 decision over Ridgeley with a 45-0 win over Keyser (W. Va.) high here last Saturday night, will meet an Alumni eleven, it was announced last night by Walter L. "Bill" Bowers, Blue and White director of athletics. Scheduling of the Alumni fills the only open date on the Campobello slate.

LaSalle Plays Ridgeley
Saturday night, LaSalle, which bowed 12-7 to Moorefield (W. Va.) High's Yellow Jackets last Friday night, should taste victory for the first time this year. The Explorers, who opened their campaign by losing 13-0 to Altoona Catholic, will entertain Coach Jesse Riggelman's Ridgeley high crew, which in games with Fort Hill and Allegany this year hasn't shown very much in the way of defense or offense.

Allegany scored in every quarter of the clash with Keyser with Fullback Don Snyder again the scoring star with fourteen points on two touchdowns and a pair of conversions. Carl "Bud" Hamersmith, Bob Williams, Jack Smith, Dick Anderson and Charles "Chick" Kellogg each tallied one touchdown.

Keyser was held to twenty-four yards from scrimmage and made only two first downs, both against the Allegany third-stringers. The West Siders racked up a dozen first downs, amassed a total of 293 yards on running plays and added forty-seven more yards on five of eleven passes.

Two Conference Games
Two Potomac Valley Conference battles appear on Friday's program. Parsons High's Panthers, who were held to a 21-21 tie by Belington last Friday, will invade Thomas, while Romney, 7-0 losers to Charles Town last Friday, will travel to Franklin. Coach Fred "Tack" Clark's Moorefield Jackets will face an Alumni aggregation in another Friday encounter.

In addition to the two games here Saturday, the West Virginia school for the Deaf of Romney will open its season by meeting the West Virginia Industrial School eleven at Pruntytown and Martinsburg's Bulldogs. 18-6 conquerors of Berkeley Springs last week, will entertain Charles Town.

On the district collegiate front last Saturday, Coach Dana "Horse" Lough's Potomac State Catamounts absorbed a 24-0 shellacking at the hands of West Liberty in a night tussle at Wheeling, W. Va.

Occupation May
Top Derby Field

Belmont Futurity Winner
and Devil's Thumb May Be Favorites

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — The first call over for the 1943 Kentucky Derby when, as and if, today made it look like a toss up between Occupation and Devil's Thumb for the honor of becoming the "people's choice" to take the big heat.

As his wins in the Arlington and Washington Park futurities weren't enough, John Marsh's Occupation moved right up front and center in the advance line-up yesterday by cake-walking to a five-length victory in the Belmont futurity. He just about ran off and add from nine other youngsters, among them at least three of the year's better gallopers.

Devil's Thumb, meantime, is taking a vacation after a busy summer. He can afford to do that on his bankroll, because he cleaned up straight stakes at Saratoga in August and Owner W. E. Boeving made no bones about the fact he expects the Thumb to grab himself that necklace of roses down in Derbytown next May.

Occupation had to share the spotlight on yesterday's Belmont card, because Whirlaway picked the same afternoon to "get hunk" with Alsab for a two-week old defeat. He whumped the Sab convincingly in the Jockey Club Gold Cup, thereby boosting his earnings to $511,486 to become the first half-million dollar breadwinner in turf history.

McIlvennan Wins Award

Stew McIlvennan, Columbia's fullback, has won the Edward S. Buff Brainard Memorial Prize because of his "qualities of mind and character."

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Brooklyn's Dodgers of the National Professional Football League moved into undisputed first place in the Eastern division today by defeating the Detroit entry so soundly they knocked Bill Edwards right out of a race as Lion coach.

The Dodgers battered the Detroiters, 28 to 7, for the Lions' third straight league defeat this season.

Also in the Eastern division, the Washington Redskins scored a touchdown in the fourth period for a 14 to 10 verdict over Philadelphia and the erstwhile leaders, the New York Giants, skidded to 10 by bowing to Pittsburgh, 13 to 10.

In a strictly Western affair the Chicago Bears, defending league champions, spilled the Cleveland Rams, 21 to 7, on the pitching of Sid Luckman.

Fred L. Mandel, owner of the Lions, dismissed Edwards after the battle with Brooklyn in which Mervin Condit raced over for three touchdowns. Backfield Coach John (Bull) Kardis was elevated to the head coach job with two players, Lloyd Cardwell and John Wiethe, as aides.

Bill Dudley, former University of Virginia All-American back, sparked the Steelers to their verdict over the Giants, although he did not score. It was the first Steeler win over the Covenants since 1936.

A thirty-five yard toss from Sammy Baugh to Andy Farkas plunged the Redskins their winning touchdown over Philadelphia. Washington waited until the final period to get the game-winning points.

Of course there are those who wonder about the conversion that must come in industry after the war.

There are some people who believe that the Kelly might never manufacture tires again. But no official expression on this question has been made for publication. However, it can be stated that most of the tire manufacturing machinery is stored at the plant here, with practically the whole of the base-ment utilized and some sections of the plant specifically set aside for this purpose.

Tire Machinery Stored

The job in itself has been a difficult task, but it is a job well done.

Even after the war is over, the plant should be in as good condition, if not better, than it was before the conversion began.

Build Section Near Pinto

In addition to the conversion of the rubber tire plant, a new plant near Pinto has just about reached the stage of completion. This plant, known as the storage area, is a part of the ordnance plant. More than a score of new buildings have been erected near the Potomac river at this point, where material will be prepared for use at the remodeled tire company buildings. This material, prepared and stored at the plant, will be moved into the local plant as needed. At this plant, there will be numerous manufacturing processes and final assembly of the war material. When the material reaches final stages, it will be packed and shipped from here, ready for use.

"The Authority on Authorities."

TO BID OR NOT TO BID
THAT IS THE question. When you have reached the fourth-hand position and have heard all three of the other players pass, what shall you do? The answer is easy if you have a strong hand, or if you have a very weak one. The problem can be tough, though, if your holding is right on the borderline. "Don't disturb the animals" is a good motto to follow sometimes, especially if your power is mainly in the minor suits, whereas "full steam ahead" is better, as a rule, if your hand is primarily a major suiter.

When you hold a hand like those shown, and the other players have all passed, you know your partner has approximately one-third of the cards you don't see, or about an average hand. That is, of course, unless one of the opponents really should have opened it. As a rule, however, when your own hand is one on the borderline between a bid and a pass, like those above, the passes of the two opponents tell you that your partner has a bit of strength, but not much.

You know that, if you pass, at least your side will not lose any points. Also that, if you bid, your pair will either gain some points or lose some. The sole question is whether you think you will profit or suffer. If the opponents have a part score, so that they need only a trick or two, bid and made, to make a game, the odds are against you, so you should usually require a bit better hand than either of those in that circumstance. But, if you have a part score, or neither side has, or both sides have, or you are playing in a duplicate game, then the odds are not against you prior to your looking at your cards.

The deciding point on holdings like those is the question of whether your side probably can safely outbid the opponents. The chances are that either side can take about as many tricks at its best declaration as the other side can at its best declaration. If your holding is predominantly major-suit in nature, especially with spade length, the chances then are that the opponents, in order to outbid your safe maximum, will have to go a level higher than they safely can, and hence give you a chance to set them. Consequently most fine players would open Hand 1.

With Hand 2 the conditions are reversed. Now, if each side can safely take the same number of tricks at its best suit, you probably will have to take a set in order to outbid opponents who have the majority of major suit cards. Hence Hand 2 makes a sounder pass. The odds in favor of the first hand and against the second are probably about 53 to 47, but that is enough margin to count in the long run.

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

If South's responses to the Blackwood convention showed you that South, who opened with 1-Spade, holds two aces and two kings, would you then bid the grand slam on North's hand of this deal?

Army Aids in Conversion Of Local Rubber Plant For War Production

Kelly-Springfield Tire Company Is Making Major Contribution toward Final Victory

To the Ordnance department and the corps of engineers of the United States Army, goes the credit for doing a task which, a few years ago, would have been termed impossible.

To the management and entire personnel of the Kelly Springfield Tire Company goes the credit for making this task possible, by converting an idea into a reality.

Less than a year ago, when war came to this country and it became evident that there must be radical changes in modes of living, ideas of government and methods of production, and it became a certainty that plants such as the Kelly Springfield Tire Company here could be called upon to produce war material, the management of the plant started planning for war production.

E. S. Burke, president, spent many weeks in search of the job which the local plant could best do, and at the same time provide maximum employment for workers in the plant and officers of the organization.

Realizing that war in the Pacific had practically severed the lines of transportation which carried raw rubber to this country, the Kelly plant faced a long period of shut-down, waiting for a possible rubber substitute, or it faced the job of conversion to a war production industry.

So the president and his able staff of assistants began the job of contacting officials, offering their plant for the purpose of producing anything vital to defense.

The plant was surveyed and a new corporation, known as the Kelly Springfield Engineering Company, was formed so the plant could be converted to war production, without interference in any way the corporation known as the Kelly Springfield Tire Company. The engineering company has the same officer personnel as the tire company and is actually owned by the tire company.

The war department then entered into a contract with the engineering company to equip and operate an ordnance plant.

Old and New Buildings

Physically, this ordnance plant consists of first, certain tire company buildings leased to the engineering company by the tire company; second, new buildings owned by the government and leased to the engineering company by the government.

The contract further provides for the complete conversion of all this leased property, as quickly as possible, to a plant which will produce ordnance material needed in war time.

By arrangement with the War department, the engineering company, under the supervision of the United States Army Ordnance department, is required to buy the necessary machinery, material and equipment needed for the conversion of the plant and for its ultimate operation. The engineering company hires its own workers, meets its own payroll and pays its own way throughout. Under the contract arrangement, all expenditures of the engineering company are then audited, and the government reimburses the engineering company dollar for dollar.

In addition to this arrangement, the government has agreed to pay the engineering company a fixed-fee amount for each production unit of material manufactured. This contract arrangement is known as a "cost plus a fixed fee" agreement.

Inspect All Material

It is the job of the Ordnance department to inspect and approve the plant as it is being built and converted. It is the job of the corps of engineers to supervise the construction. These two military branches necessarily work very close to each other in the task of getting the plant ready for production. After this is done, the corps of engineers personnel assigned here will probably not be needed, and the only military unit remaining here will be the Ordnance department personnel. It will then be their task to inspect and accept or reject all war material produced here.

Engage Private Contractor

The remodeling and construction at the Kelly, while under the direct supervision of army engineers, is being done by a private contractor, Charles H. Tomkins Company, Washington, D. C. The army engineers also had the assistance of a firm of architects, Mauran, Russell, Crowell and Mullhardt. This firm, also under the supervision of the army engineers, designed the plant and supervised the transportation and construction.

The project manager representing the private contracting firm is L. S. Dixon.

The task of taking a huge industry out of one field into another in peace time would be an enormous undertaking, and one that would probably not be attempted under normal conditions. But in time of war, when the nation must be geared to producing war material and war equipment, the task here was undertaken with little fear or doubt by the combined efforts of local industrialists, army ordnance men and army engineers.

Kingsley Church Observes Sixtieth Anniversary Week

Free of Debt, Church Invests Funds in U. S. War Savings Bonds

Free of indebtedness and already planning a program of beautification and expansion for after the war, Kingsley Methodist congregation is this week observing the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the church.

At last night's church service, the Rev. H. A. Kester, pastor, told his congregation the board had purchased ten $100 war bonds and had just received funds for the purchase of another bond. This money, he said, will be used as a part of the $15,000 program for the beautification of the sanctuary.

The church liquidated and burned its mortgage of $28,000 June 24, and is said to be in sound financial condition as it observes its birthday.

During this week, there will be special services and program each evening. Tonight the board will meet. Tuesday evening the Rev. F. G. Jaggers, of the Anacostia Methodist church, Washington, will speak. On Wednesday night, the Rev. William Lewis, Federick Avenue Methodist church, Baltimore, will deliver the sermon. Both the Rev. Jaggers and the Rev. Lewis are former local pastors.

On October 28, 1890, Mrs. Thomas was married to Col. John Williams Avirett, of Cumberland; following her death, she was married on November 28, 1916, to Dr. James Walter Thomas, prominent lawyer and historian of Maryland.

Surviving are two children, John Williams Avirett II, Baltimore attorney, and James Alfred Avirett, Cumberland attorney, now serving with the armed forces and stationed at Camp Eustis, Va., also a grandson, Hume Opie Annan, Jr., of this city. The late Donnell Dunbar Avirett Annan was a daughter. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Charles W. Eoff, of Kansas City, Mo.

Amateur Radio Operators Plan For Examination

Local Group May Become Important Part of Interior Defense

A number of young men and women here, who have been studying a course in radio operation under the supervision of the Western Maryland Amateur Radio Club, will be given an examination October 14.

The examination will be conducted by a field representative of the Federal Communications Commission and those who satisfactorily complete it will be issued an operator's license.

Radio communication, termed vital in the event of local or national emergency, is being encouraged as a part of the nation's civilian defense and preparedness program. Thomas J. McNulty, Baltimore, has been appointed to the job of forming and heading the War Emergency Radio Service in Maryland.

L. R. Jenkins of this city is the aide for Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties. It is planned to build a series of amateur stations throughout this region for defense purposes, and many of these stations will be operated by the young men and women now completing an extensive course of training for operation.

Attorney General Named To Serve on American Bar Association Group

William C. Walsh, attorney-general, has been appointed by George M. Morris, president of the American Bar Association, to represent the state on the association's committee on state legislation.

The objective of committee members is to secure the enactment in their respective states of legislation approved by the American Bar Association and recommended by it to the state legislatures for adoption. Another objective is for the members to cooperate with commissioners from their respective states in the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws in securing the adoption of acts recommended by the conference and approved by the American Bar Association.
